

Philip Stein's Ladies' Signature uses Natural Frequency Technology to help you rest and recover from jet lag. $1,375, at Bloomingdale's

Hublot's King Power Unico GMT displays multiple time zones with four rotating aluminum discs. $30,900, at Hublot

Chanel's ceramic and titanium J12 GMT Chromatic brings practical function to feminine form. $7,150, at Chanel

Montblanc's TimeWalker TwinFly Chronograph GreyTech gets technical in titanium. $14,800, at Montblanc

Flight Attendants

Behold the travel timepieces that will bring you well into the future. | By Laurie Kable |

Rolex's Oyster Perpetual Sky-Dweller with 14 patents arrives in stores this fall. Price upon request, at select authorized Rolex dealers, rolex.com

Officine Panerai's PAM 438 Tuttonero Luminor 1950 3 Days GMT Automatic Ceramic is far from basic in black. $16,300, at Officine Panerai

Breitling's Transocean Chronograph Unitime displays 24 world time zones. $11,200, at Breitling

Omega's Seamaster Aqua Terra GMT, which lands in stores this July, tracks a second time zone with a red GMT hand that circles the dial every 24 hours. $7,800, at Omega